SELECTMEN'S REPORT.

On the preceding pages the Selectmen present their report of the disbursements in the various departments during the year; which we think are given in detail sufficiently to show the manner in which the money has been expended.

The expenses have in most cases been kept within the appropriations.

The amount ($1500) appropriated for salaries of town officers, was not sufficient to pay them for the time they were obliged to spend to do the work required of them.

The appropriation for night watchman was expended before the closing of the year, but we thought it for the best interest of the town to keep one employed until the annual meeting of the Town.

During the months of September and October, the streets outside the village were not lighted, which enabled us to keep within the appropriation, although it was considerably reduced from the previous year.

Summer Avenue has been completed, and with the amount overdrawn last year, paid from the money received of the County.

On account of the reduced appropriation for the repairs of highways, and the damaging rains of last summer, for the safety of travel we were compelled to have extra work done, and employed the keeper of the almshouse, leaving a balance due that department, and also find the streets are not in as good repair as a year ago.

We have during the year fitted a room in the basement of the town building, at a cost of fifty dollars, for the accommodation of tramps, thereby greatly reducing the expense and trouble of caring for them.

From the experience of the work of the past year, we present for your consideration the following list of appropriations:

The accounts of the Selectmen, Treasurer, and Collector have been examined and found correct.

The balance of cash in hand, as stated by the Treasurer, $6,387.72, is correct; and the trust funds and appropriations for town debt are in bank.

The first note of the town coming due, is for $6,000, payable July 27th, 1887. We now have on hand, appropriated towards the payment of the debt, $3,918 00; and with the usual appropriations toward this object for this year and next, we shall be ready to pay this note when due—and a part of the next one, which comes due August 9th, 1887, for $4,500 00.

We would suggest that the land in rear of the engine house does not appear to be needed for any uses of the town, and might probably be wanted for a building lot; and that therefore the Selectmen might be authorized to sell the same when a suitable price is offered, and apply the proceeds to the payment of the debt.

EDWARD APPLETON,	} Auditors.
FRANK W. B. PRATT,
A. NEWELL HOWES,

Report of the Board of Engineers.

To the Honorable Board of Selectmen of the Town of Reading:

The Engineers of the Fire Department make their report.

During the past year the department has responded to five (5) alarms.

1885. April 1. 3.50 A. M. Unoccupied building of Lawrence Duly. Loss, $300; insurance, $300; insurance received, $275. Incendiary.
1885. July 4. 3.00 P. M. House of O. W. Austin. No damage. Fire crackers.
1885. July 6. 2.00 A. M. Mrs. C. A. Brown's house and barn. Loss, $1500; insurance, $1800; insurance received, $1115. Occupied by J. W. Crowell. Loss, $1500; insurance, $1500; insurance received, $1100. Incendiary.
1885. Oct. 9. 6.30 P. M. Jacob Jones' unoccupied barn. Loss, $200; insurance, none. Tramps.
1886. Jan. 23. 2.45 P. M. Wm. Proctor's store and varnish room. Loss, building, $300; stock and fixtures, $1200;— ($1500); insurance, $800; insurance received, $750. Over-heated oven.

We think that the citizens have reason to feel grateful for the comparatively small loss of property by fire during the past year.

The only change in the apparatus since the last report has been the purchase of twelve (12) feet of rubber suction hose for the Hancock engine. The department now owns two thousand feet of new hose, and about two thousand feet of old leather hose, mostly in fair condition. The steamer and hook and ladder house is in good condition; the house of Hancock No. 2, will need a small outlay; the house of Eagle, No.

4, will soon require extensive repairs to be of any use to the town ; but as the engine has been removed to the basement of the steamer house, the Engineers recommend the sale of the house, and the appropriation of as much of the money as may be needed to arch the cisterns now under the Eagle house. We recommend that the Engineers be authorized to sell the Eagle engine, if they can do so to the advantage of the town.

The Engineers think that there are several places where there is urgent need of cisterns, to ensure a sufficient supply of water in case of fire, and recommend that an appropriation of $650 be made to build the same. They also recommend that a driven well be sunk on the plain, west of the depot, at a cost of $200.

It is the opinion of the Board that twenty-five hundred dollars should be appropriated to meet the expenses of the department for the ensuing year.

In conclusion, the Board desires to thank the citizens generally, and especially the members of the Reading Protective Association, who have rendered very efficient service at all fires.

No extraordinary expenditures for permanent improvements have been made. Consequently no part of the appropriation made by the town at the last annual meeting has been drawn, enough having been realized from the sale of lots to defray all expenses incurred. We do not now recommend any special outlay for any work beyond what is required to keep the grounds in good condition. If, in the coming year the general financial condition of the town seems to warrant it, and no special call for large expenditures in any of the other departments appears, we suggest to the voters, that a larger amount may perhaps be wisely expended in keeping the place more uniformly attractive.

LIBRARY REPORT.

The Trustees of the Public Library submit the following report:—

During the year the circulation has slightly exceeded 16,000 volumes. A supplement to the general catalogue has been issued, and another is in process of preparation.

The new system of delivery is found to be satisfactory, and the increase in circulation is due to it, and to the fact that patrons now have access to a complete catalogue.

For the first time since its establishment, the library has been open continuously throughout the year on the usual days, the annual closing for examination not now being required.

The receipts and expenses of the library during the current year, have been as follows:

At the beginning of the year, eighty-six pupils were enrolled in this school. Twenty-one graduated in June with the usual honors, their names appearing in the appendix. Forty-eight pupils entered the school in September, the total number enrolled at that time being one hundred and four. The entering class was not only the largest in numbers, but is considered the best prepared of any that has entered the school since it has been in charge of the present principal, and it is reported as having maintained its record for diligence and good behavior ever since. The principal reports that the illness of pupils has interfered with the work of the school during the last part of the winter term.

The advanced class, provided for under the four years' course, has proved successful. This class, by permission of the Committee, has taken algebra instead of logic, the study prescribed in the course, in order to provide for the requirements for admission to the Institute of Technology, and to enable the pupils to extend their knowledge of mathematics. The principal states that the class in geometry in the three years' course has done considerable extra work in mechanical drawing during the year, of a very practical nature. In the absence of drawing as a prescribed study, this class has developed especially marked ability in this direction, both in geometry and in connection with the study of physics. Another interesting feature of the ordinary work of the school is thus stated: "We have taken up from time to time general exercises based on facts obtained from the daily papers, and have attempted to notice the most important events of the day."

Classes in reading have been conducted four times a week, and the senior class is commended for particularly good work.

The Committee some time ago declined to grant excuses to pupils who desired to omit the exercises in music, and the benefits of this policy are now obvious. The boys are reported as giving the best singing heard from them in many years.

Contrary to the usual plan, the diplomas were presented to the graduating class in the school room, the exhibition in the church being omitted. This change was made by the class voluntarily, but was entirely satisfactory to the Committee, and, we believe, to all interested.

GRAMMAR AND PRIMARY DEPARTMENTS.

Four hundred and fifty-nine pupils are at present enrolled in these schools.

The attendance during most of the year has been good, but during the winter months the prevalence of scarlet fever and measles has materially affected several schools, particularly the lower primaries. No cases of truancy of a serious nature have been brought to the attention of the Committee. The work of the schools would be improved if another grade were introduced between the primaries and the high school, thus giving an additional year's instruction before entering the latter; and the advisability of forming an additional class to carry out this improvement will doubtless demand the attention of the Committee in the near future.

STUDIES PURSUED.

Under this head we present abstracts of reports made to the Committee, by teachers of the different schools.

Reading. (1.) "The aim in reading has been to express ideas instead of reading words; to secure natural reading the pupil is asked to tell what he has read. The difficult words are pronounced clearly by the class in concert, and individually after the teacher. Concert exercises on vowel sounds have been given: also breathing exercises. In the study of a reading lesson, the pupils are taught to refer to the dictionary for pronunciation, rather than to the teacher. Instead of lessons from the reader, sometimes the pupils read from the history, geography, or physiology. Reading at sight has been limited, as the books for that purpose are beyond the capacity of the present class, and too few in number. I have several books of my own at the desk which I frequently use for sight reading, calling children to the front of the room, and insisting on their reading so plainly that all shall understand. Most children read well anything they can comprehend."

(2.) "My first effort in a reading class is to teach the pupils to understand and enjoy whatever they are reading. They study the lesson, and tell the story, or the meaning of what they have read, in language of their own. Then they read the words of the author with as much of the author's spirit as I can infuse into them, striving to obtain clear articulation and correct pronunciation."

(3.) "In teaching reading, my aim has been to lead the pupil first to grasp the thought expressed, and then to train his voice to effectively render the passage. The first object has been attained by questions and talks about the reading lesson. Voice culture has been attained by means of vocal exercises on vowel and other sounds, and by breathing exercises to develop chest power. Special attention to distinct articulation has been insisted on."

(4.) "In reading I have used the reader, some occasional supplementary books, vocal drill, etc. Have stimulated interest and secured attention sometimes, by allowing the class to question the pupil after he has read a paragraph."

(5.) "My method in teaching reading, is to aim that my pupils may grasp the thought and express it most naturally and effectively. I try to have them read by sentences a thought, rather than a word at a time, and aim to make thought govern expression always."

(6.) "The aim of the work in reading and spelling for this grade (primary) is to increase the vocabulary of the children. In teaching a new word, when practicable the object is first presented and its name given by the children. The word is then written on the board. Its form is studied until pupils can reproduce it upon their slates whenever the object is placed before them, or when the word is spoken. The class is then taught to use the new word in constructing sentences."

(7.) "I teach the beginners to read by the written word method, using the blackboard wholly for nearly three months. During this time and after they have books I aim to teach them to read as they would talk."

Spelling. (1.) "When I assign a spelling lesson, the meaning of each word is ascertained, and each is put into a sentence. At recitation time the lesson is written."

(2.) "Spelling has been largely written with oral lessons twice a week. Dictation exercises are frequent. Misspelled words in nearly all written exercises, such as compositions and examinations, have been marked, and in written examinations one per cent for every three words misspelled has been deducted from the mark otherwise obtained by the pupil. In taking up the review questions in Warren's geography, answers have been frequently written on the board by pupils, and errors corrected by the class. The spelling of proper names has been much improved in this way."

(3.) "In spelling our work is largely written, though I occasionally give an oral lesson to teach articulation. Usually the pupils are given a list of words, which they are to study, looking for the pronunciation and meaning in their dictionaries. They are then asked to introduce these words into sentences.

I have this year insisted on correct spelling in all written examinations, the pupil losing part of his mark for every misspelled word. The result is very satisfactory to me."

(4.) "In spelling, while they read in the primer, (primary grade) each pupil spells at sight every new word that occurs. When they begin the second reader they spell the words arranged at the beginning of the lessons, orally and write them. Every day I give one word in the lesson to build a sentence on, to help them in writing and spelling and lead them to express themselves easily about objects and things with which they are familiar."

(5.) "I teach spelling in connection with the reading, and find I have much better results than by using sets of words half of which children can not understand. After the reading I give words to learn which are to be found in their reading, and which they will have occasion to use."

(6.) "I have been teaching phonetic spelling in the lower classes, gradually exchanging this for the common method as the children become more acquainted with the forms of words."

Numbers. (1.) "Numbers are taught from illustrations, leading the pupils to perceive the principles, and to make application of them."

(2.) "Frequent reviews have been made of fractions. Practical examples have been given constantly, and the effort made to have the children do more work with the head and less with the pencil. The children usually perform their work in arithmetic, and leave the explanation of the examples until the next morning. A night's sleep often clears the brain wonderfully."

(3.) "The work of my class in numbers has been fairly satisfactory. I have given more drill than ever this year in mental arithmetic, rapid calculation, the making of change, etc. The pupils show a gain in power to work independently, self-reliance being rigidly insisted upon in all their work."

(4.) "In teaching the elements of numbers, I have used splints and blocks, and sought to lead pupils to observe for themselves, and state their observations. In the four fundamental rules, addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division, there is necessarily much mechanical work. The rapidity and accuracy of execution vary with different classes."

(5.) My method of teaching fractions is, first, a development of ideas of fractional numbers by actual handling of parts of things; so I have prepared a set of rulers and discs for school use. Second, I believe in oral drill to fix the facts, and to train to rapidity of calculation. Third, application in practical problems of knowledge gained."

(6.) "The facts of each number are systematically taught with splints and numerical frame. The facts thus shown are committed to memory, written on slates, and repeated as tables."

(7.) "Numbers I teach objectively in a great measure, almost entirely so with the beginners. In all my classes in numbers I have a great deal of drill in rapid addition, combination, and separation of numbers."

(8.) "I am at present using Grube's method with the youngest pupils, and shall continue to do so with all who begin that study with me."

History. (1.) "History is a study which the children generally find entertaining. I always go through with the advance lesson with them, showing them the important points, and telling any stories connected with the day's work. I have several histories at the desk, which they use freely."

(2.) "The pupils have a number of histories from which they obtain information concerning logically arranged topics prepared for them. Causes and effects, together with the peculiarities of the various historical characters, are discussed. Continued reviews and drill fix the facts in the mind."

Language. (1.) "Some attention has been given to simple analysis, and the pupils show an improvement in their ability to think. Incorrect sentences are corrected, and the reason given. The mistakes in punctuation and spelling in composition work are frequently put upon the board, and the pupils find out how to make them right. Selections from standard authors are learned, and copied neatly into blank books."

(2.) "The work in language for the year has consisted of dictation and composition exercises, the study of principles of correct writing and speaking, technical grammar, and incorrect syntax."

(3.) "Language is taught both with and without the book, from board and oral exercises; our aim being variety, so as to make the study interesting."

Music. (1.) "In music the children are slowly learning to read at sight. Three-part music is sung; the boys working hard to sustain their part."

(2.) "In music my pupils have progressed far beyond what I had thought possible. At the beginning of the year they lacked confidence in singing to such a degree that it was almost impossible to get them to sing the simplest exercise without aid. Now they sing readily two-part music, and write the scales they have studied, and have made good progress in the study of time."

(3.) "In music, we have read and sung pieces in different keys, have had drill in time, and the use of the French time-names."

(4.) "The work in music under the present director is satisfactory, and enjoyed by the pupils."

Drawing. (1.) "In drawing, the pupils have made working plans of objects and given some slight attention to object-drawing. They have made original designs for tiles, carpets, wall paper and borders. They have also done the work in copying which the drawing book prescribes, and some geometrical forms in free-hand."

(2.) "In drawing, the children have been led to make working plans of simple objects, as bands, plates, fans, etc. The pupils have shown much interest in simple exercises in design. Some elements for these have been forms of flowers which they have conventionalized for themselves. Some slight attention has been given to object drawing, but it is beyond my grade, at present. I have sought to train the eye by leading the pupils to estimate the proportions of different lines, in their working plans. The improvement in this direction has been satisfactory."

(3.) "In drawing we have taken the plane figures, circle and its parts, one or two original designs, and have drawn from objects, besides nearly finishing our free-hand book."

(4.) "In drawing, the work has been mostly from dictation, combined with designing exercises, using squares and circles on which to build."

Physiology and Hygiene. (1.) "We have had lessons in physiology, perhaps twice a week. The object has not been for the pupils to memorize the facts simply, but the important subjects have been discussed with interest, and I hope with profit."

(2.) "No hour is looked forward to with more pleasure than that spent studying physiology. The text book provided has been our guide, but information has been gathered from many other sources."

(3.) "In the study of temperance hygiene, the pupils have become quite enthusiastic. We usually consider our lesson by the use of a topical outline put on the board before the study hour. The pupil is not confined to the text book, but is encouraged to bring in information from all sources."

(4.) "The children are very much interested in the subject, and are anxious for the day to come on which we have lessons in these books."

(5.) "In hygiene we have had daily lessons since the introduction of the study, until two weeks ago; since then twice a week. The pupils are all interested in the study."

(6.) "We have used the temperance physiologies, as readers, and had familiar talks on the subjects therein."

(7.) "In hygiene the children show great interest, and their examinations indicate a clear understanding of the subjects studied. I have performed several of the experiments indicated in the text book, showing the properties and effects of alcohol."

(8.) "The Child's Health Primer has awakened an interest in the study of the human body and the laws of health."

(9.) "I have been able to get even my youngest children interested in temperance and hygiene, and can see good results even now."

Geography. (1.) "In geography we have considered South America and Europe. We take up each continent by topics. The class has a topical outline given to it, and the pupil is referred to the text book for information regarding each topic. At first it is necessary for me to go over the lesson with the class, but they soon learn to consult their text books for themselves. Of course surface, rivers, and other physical features are found by consulting maps. I have found that productions, such as wheat, coal, etc., are better impressed on the mind if we regard each as occurring in belts; and the pupil is sometimes asked to draw an outline map of a continent, and represent upon it the wheat belt, the coal fields, etc."

The foregoing extracts have been given with considerable fullness, because they present an accurate view of the work now being done in our schools. They show that our teachers are striving to follow rational methods of instruction, and in many respects indicate a distinct advance beyond the routine work of the past. Such an advance it is gratifying to note.

NEW SCHOOL HOUSE.

Last year, in obedience to the instructions of the town at a previous meeting, the Committee reported estimates for certain alterations in the John street and Union Hall buildings, to better accommodate the centre primary schools. The need of better rooms for these schools has for several years been urgently presented by the Committee.

The action of the town at its last meeting, however, was confined to appropriating the sum of $250 for the purpose of leasing temporary quarters for the Lower primary, the tone of the discussion seeming favorable to further action upon the main question at the end of the present year.

It was thought that a building near the centre of the town might in the mean time be leased for the sum appropriated. The Committee have been unable to secure such a building, and the old school room, entirely inadequate and sanitarily deficient as it is, has been occupied up to the present time. The Committee during the present year have discussed the subject, and have considered the remodeling of the Union Hall building, with the erection of wings upon each side to contain entries and stairways, and have also secured estimates for the erection of a new four-room building properly arranged with adequate clothes-rooms, etc.

The remodeling of Union Hall is estimated to cost from $3,000 to $3,500. The new building can be built for a sum not exceeding $7,000. The Committee have carefully considered both propositions, and unanimously recommend the town to erect a new building. The matter will come before the annual meeting under an appropriate article.

COMMITTEE VACANCIES.

Two vacancies in the Committee are to be filled at the ensuing town meeting. The terms of Messrs. Stillman E. Parker and Edward F. Parker expire.

APPROPRIATIONS.

The Committee recommend that the town raise and appropriate the sum of $8,300 for regular school expenses, and they also recommend that $1,400 be raised and appropriated for incidental school expenses, including the purchase of text books and supplies.

Attention is called to the statistics, and to the report of receipts and expenditures contained in the Appendix.
